There are risks to be aware of with bridging loans. If the existing property takes longer than expected to sell, or sells for less than expected your client could end up owing more than planned and may be at risk of a default on their loan. Some strategies to reduce your client's risks are allocating more of the loan to end debt, maximising the bridging term and listing the property for sale early. Talk to your client about which strategies suit their situation.

How Apollo Next bridging loans are structured

Step 1: Refinance and find your new property

Current loan:

- Refinance before purchasing to access equity or streamline the settlement.
- Any existing loan will be refinanced as part of the bridging loan.
- 5% shading applies.

Step 2: Purchase new property and enter bridging period

Bridging period:

- There are no minimum repayments required on a bridging loan when capitalising interest.
- If you have an end loan you'll start making payments right away.
- Interest capitalisation is not included in the peak debt LVR when there is an end loan and no COS.

Step 3: Sell existing property and exit bridging period

Step 4: Enjoy your new property

End loan:

- Bridging loan is closed when the existing property is sold.

About Apollo

Two home lending super brands

Apollo is a partnership between two Australian home lending super brands, who are powering the future of the industry - Athena Home Loans and LMG. Apollo's mission is to deliver radically better lending by fighting compromise with progressive client experiences and innovative products.

Athena Home Loans burst into the industry in 2019 to shake things up and change home loans for good. Showing Australians there's a lender on their side, Athena continues to rewrite the rules of home lending by creating tools, products, digital platforms and policy that put the power back in clients' hands.
